

KENYA SCHOOL OF INTERNET GOVERNANCE

Call for applications

DEADLINE: 28TH
OCTOBER 2016

Call for application to the first Kenya School of Internet governance (KeSIG) is open from 18th until 28th October. KeSIG will take place at Stathmore University from 16th - 18th November 2016.

KeSIG is an introductory course covering technical, economic, legal and contemporary social issues brought about by the Internet and how they affect Kenyan decision making.

The school targets Kenyan citizens from all sectors: government, academia, tech community, civil society, bloggers and journalists who are new to Internet Governance issues.

KeSIG is an introductory course covering technical, economic, legal and contemporary social issues brought about by the Internet and how they impact on social, political and economic developments in Kenya. It aims to build critical mass of individuals advocating for Internet rights and freedoms through equipping the participants with the skills needed to participate meaningfully in local, regional and global policy discourse.
